SOVIET DELEGATES SCORE HUNGARIAN
AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION METHODS

A Soviet delegation of 45 agricultural experts has spent 4 weeks visiting Hungary. After touring the country, they came to the conclusion that the producers' cooperatives and state farms fail to utilize many possibilities offered by the Soviet-type production methods. In addition, they found the problem of work organization unsolved. In many places the work is unsystematic, and organization of the brigades is inadequate. Members of the producers' cooperatives were frequently found to be ignorant of their own plans and tasks. The Soviet delegates emphasized that effective work organization is a prerequisite for the successful operation of producers' cooperatives.

Another problem of equal importance is the strengthening of work discipline. Persons, found guilty of lax discipline, have to be dealt with severely.

The Soviet delegates have pointed out that many producers' cooperatives and state farms are still using obsolete methods, and thus fail to utilize the possibilities of large-scale production.
